Abstract:

A method of adapting the characteristics of a call server to optimise the call server's performance and usage of available network resources. A network management element determines the impact of any changes in the condition of the network on the call

5   server and provides an indication to the call server which resets at least one characteristic of the call server to optimise the call server's performance.